

Mr. Andrea Petrelli is a Labor and Social Protection Economist with over eight years of experience in the GCC and MENA regions. He currently serves as a Labour Market Technical Officer at the International Labour Organization (ILO) in Doha, Qatar, where he leads the engagement with the Ministry of Labour (MOL) on employment policies, workforce upskilling initiatives, and labor market statistics.

Previously, Mr. Petrelli worked with the World Bank's Middle East and North Africa Social Protection and Jobs (SPJ) Global Practice, providing strategic support to the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia on labor markets, social protection systems, and pension reforms. His responsibilities included offering insights on wages, minimum income policies, and integrated case management for social protection programs, alongside advising on productive aging and longer working lives.

Mr. Petrelli's versatile skill set in quantitative and qualitative research, evaluation methods, and multidimensional analysis enables him to deliver evidence-based policy recommendations across various sectors. With country experience in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, Morocco, Jordan, Iraq, and Syria, he brings valuable insights from diverse contexts. He holds an MA in International Economics from Johns Hopkins University in Washington, DC and an MBA from Milan's Graduate School of Management, further grounding his expertise in economic analysis, policy development and program implementation.
