

Sara Hertog, PhD

Sara Hertog is a Population Affairs Officer in the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs. For more than 17 years she has analyzed population and demographic trends in the context of the internationally agreed development goals, including the SDGs. Working among a team of demographers and statisticians to produce the UN's World Population Prospects, she is primarily responsible for the estimates and projections of population size and demographic trends for the Western and Southern Asian regions. She holds a PhD in Demography and master's degree in Population Health Sciences from the University of Wisconsin, Madison.